Indiana – Severe Storms, Straight-line Winds, and Tornadoes FEMA-4058-DR

Declared March 9, 2012

On March 8, 2012, Governor Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr. requested a major disaster declaration due to severe storms, straight-line winds, and tornadoes during the period of February 29 to March 3, 2012. The Governor requested a declaration for Individual Assistance for six counties and Hazard Mitigation statewide. During the period of March 6-7, 2012, joint federal, state, and local government Preliminary Damage Assessments (PDAs) were conducted in the requested counties and are summarized below. PDAs estimate damages immediately after an event and are considered, along with several other factors, in determining whether a disaster is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the state and the affected local governments, and that Federal assistance is necessary.¹

On March 9, 2012, President Obama declared that a major disaster exists in the State of Indiana. This declaration made Individual Assistance requested by the Governor available to affected individuals and households in Clark, Jefferson, Ripley, Scott, Warrick, and Washington Counties. This declaration also made Hazard Mitigation Grant Program assistance requested by the Governor available for hazard mitigation measures statewide.²

² When a Governor's request for major disaster assistance under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended (Stafford Act) is under review, a number of primary factors are considered to determine whether assistance is warranted. These factors are outlined in FEMA's regulations (44 CFR § 206.48). The President has ultimate discretion and decision making authority to declare major disasters and emergencies under the Stafford Act (42 U.S.C. § 5170 and § 5191).
